ANTIQUITY RECOVERED: THE LEGACY OF POMPEII AND HERCULANEUM

A Symposium at the University of Pennsylvania, University
Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology, October 4-5, 2002

"Antiquity Recovered: The Legacy of Pompeii and Herculaneum" is a symposium that will be held at the University of Pennsylvania October 4-5, 2002. The conference will coincide with the exhibition "Antiquity Recovered: Pompeii and Herculaneum in Philadelphia Collections," on view at the Arthur Ross Gallery, University of Pennsylvania, from September 21 to December 1, 2002. For more information, see <http://www.mceas.org/october2002/>

The aim of the symposium is to explore how the archaeological excavations in Pompeii, Herculaneum, and other sites in the Bay of Naples influenced responses to the classical tradition from the eighteenth century through the modern era in both Europe and America. The discoveries emerged as a touchstone for a rigorous, multifaceted revival of antiquity in which elements from antiquity were incorporated into wide-ranging aspects of civic and cultural life. Political entities (including the newly-independent United States) espoused and reinterpreted the material as an appropriate vocabulary for national identity. Herculaneum and Pompeii continued to play an important role in nineteenth- and twentieth-century society as the sites became the catapult for Sturm und Drang fantasies, a model for refined and opulent leisure, and one of the most significant archaeological and tourist sites in the Mediterranean.

"Antiquity Recovered" is divided into five sections. On Friday, we will present an opening session devoted to reception of the Villa of the Mysteries as well as an introductory lecture by Christopher M.S. Johns. On Saturday we have three sessions, Archaeology, Encounters, and Travel, which will encompass eleven papers. For more information, the full symposium program, and paper abstracts, please visit <http://www.mceas.org/october2002/>. For all other questions, please contact the chairs, Victoria C. Gardner Coates and Jon L. Seydl (victoriacoates@aol.com or jseydl@sas.upenn.edu).

The event has been sponsored by: The McNeil Center for Early American Studies, the Department of the History of Art, the Center for Ancient Studies, the Center for Italian Studies, the Graduate Group in the Art and Architecture of the Mediterranean World, the Classical Studies Department, the History Department, the Department of English, and the Comparative Literature and Literary Theory Program of the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology, with additional support from The Samuel H. Kress Foundation.

EARLY METALLURGY IN CYPRUS- THE LAST 20 YEARS 1982-2002

Nicosia, 21st September 2002, Archaeological Research Unit, University of Cyprus, Nicosia, CYPRUS

Dear Friends,

I am sending you the announcement of a small workshop on Early Metallurgy that I am organising here at the University of Cyprus. The whole idea was born when Bob Maddin and Andreas Hauptmann announced they were going to come to Cyprus for a small project. As it has been exactly 20 years since the publication of the original conference I thought it would be a good idea to organise a sequel. It was all done in great haste and at the very last minute which is why you are finding about it today and not before! I know that most of you will not be in Cyprus at that time, but I thought that you would probably like to know what is happening here! I look forward to seeing those of you who are on the island at the moment. Apart from the actual conference there will also be a reception for the sepaers on Friday, the 20th September 2002 at 19.30 and you are all welcome.

best wishes

Lina

PROGRAM

It has been twenty years since the publication of the ground-breaking conference, "Early Metallurgy in Cyprus - 4000-500 BC". The conference proceedings, edited by J.D. Muhly, R. Maddin and V. Karageorghis, have been a sourcebook for anyone working on the archaeometallurgy of the Eastern Mediterranean. Over the last twenty years, however, continuous fieldwork has brought to light new evidence which has radically altered many established views. This is why the Archaeological Research Unit of the Department of History and Archaeology of the University of Cyprus, has decided to organize a sequel entitled, "Early Metallurgy in Cyprus –the last 20 years 1982-2002. Scholars, like R. Maddin, J. Muhly, H.G. Bachmann, B. Rothenberg, and F. Lo Schiavo, who participated in the original conference, will now be joined by colleagues, like A. Hauptmann, Y. Bassiakos, W. Fasnacht, S. Van Lokeren, G. Pappasavvas and V.

Kassianidou, who have been active in the field in Cyprus and the neighbouring regions in more recent years. During the workshop, new excavation and analytical data concerning the archaeometallurgy of the Eastern Mediterranean will be presented. The meeting is organised within the framework of the wider project "Advanced Technologies for the Management and Promotion of Cultural Heritage" and is funded by the Protocol of Cooperation between Cyprus and Greece for 2000-2002.

The workshop will take place on Saturday the 21st of September 2002, in the building of the Archaeological Research Unit, of the University of Cyprus, at 12 Gladstone street in Nicosia and it is open to the interested public. The final program is given below. For more information please contact Dr Vasiliki Kassianidou, at 22674658 or send an email to v.kassianidou@ucy.ac.cy.

POWER AND ARCHITECTURE - MONUMENTAL PUBLIC ARCHITECTURE IN THE BRONZE AGE NEAR EAST AND AEGEAN

Faculty of Arts – Leuven, 21-22 November 2002

We kindly invite you for the international conference “Power and Architecture - Monumental Public Architecture in the Bronze Age Near East and Aegean”, Faculty of Arts - Justus Lipsius Lecture Hall - Blijde-Inkomststraat 21 – Leuven, 21-22 November 2002 - 9.30-18.00.

Public buildings reflect the investment of social resources and they are usually interpreted as the embodiments of political, social, religious and economic power. The architecture of such buildings is often especially devised to reflect the performance of this power, incorporating a symbolism that served as a signpost for a particular social order. This symbolism was especially carried by monumentality and enhanced by scale, location, decoration, materials and visual impact. By making particular use of the natural landscape and the artificially created environment, the monumentality of the public buildings helped to improve social cohesion and legitimated a particular societal system. Moreover, their intergenerational use conveyed such buildings great potential for communication and remembrance, especially during specific ceremonies.

Studies of religious-political development in such societies as Mesopotamia or Minoan Crete have indicated that the intensification of political complexity is often accompanied by an escalation of ritual activity and the development of new varieties of it. This expansion and reorganisation of ritual can be interpreted as part of the effort to communicate and sustain new elite ideologies. An obvious Near Eastern example is provided by pre- and early urban southern Mesopotamia, where increasing religious-political complexity is associated with the construction of larger temple complexes. The elite preoccupation with and dependence on ideological legitimisation is aptly illustrated by the fact that the majority of early Mesopotamian royal inscriptions deal with the construction or renovation of temples.

The workshop aims to unite theoretical and practical researchers of monumentality in the Bronze Age Near East and Aegean to discuss to what extent use was made of architecture in the representation of power. From a mature moment onwards in the Uruk period in Mesopotamia and from the Early Minoan/Helladic period in the Aegean, about a millennium later, monumental buildings appear, seemingly two unrelated developments. But was this really the case? What are the origins of monumentality in the Near East and Aegean? To what extent did these buildings acquire a special significance as architectural manifestation of a ruler? What are the methods used to address monumentality in the Near East and the Aegean? If architectural manifestation should be seen as an ongoing development reflecting an always evolving social organisation, how did it help the legitimisation process?

AEA - BOURNEMOUTH UNIVERSITY ONE-DAY MEETING

Saturday October 19th 2002, School of Conservation Sciences, Bournemouth University, Talbot Campus, Fern Barrow, Poole

The AEA autumn one-day meeting will be held on Saturday 19th October at Bournemouth University in the School of Conservation Sciences. Owing to the lack of Annual Conference this year, the AGM will be held on the day of the meeting.

We will have an open programme and offers of short papers (20 minutes) are invited. The presentation of recent results of all aspects of Environmental Archaeology and Palaeoecology are welcomed. The meeting is intended to be informal and students are to be encouraged. Contributors are asked to provide short abstracts in advance of the meeting. Tea and coffee will be provided and there will be a break for lunch (not provided unless requested). A small charge of £5 for the day will be made to cover costs of printing and refreshments. The School of Conservation Sciences (Talbot Campus) is about 30 minutes walk from Bournemouth station. Maps will be provided on request. The booking form is at the back of this Newsletter.

Papers to start at 10.30am and finish about 4.30pm (followed by AGM)

If you would like to offer a contribution, please email us (co lpearson@bournemouth.ac.uk) or post the form at the back of the newsletter. The closing date for the submission of paper titles/abstracts is 1st September 2002.

For further information please contact one of the organisers, via Louise Pearson at School of Conservation Sciences, Bournemouth University, Talbot Campus, Fern Barrow, Poole, BH12 5BB

Organisers: Helen Smith, Mark Maltby, Ellen Hambleton and Sheila Boardman.

WORLDS APART? HUMAN SETTLEMENT AND BIOTA OF ISLANDS

Association for Environmental Archaeology Annual Symposium, School of Archaeology and Palaeoecology,
Queens University Belfast, Belfast, 24th-26th April 2003

Islands play a central role in the formation of both environmental and social communities. This conference aims to bring together palaeoecologists, environmental archaeologists, archaeologists and social historians to explore these themes. Ireland has a rich archaeology and natural history associated with islands, ranging from investigations of small islands and crannogs in lakes, islands in sea Loughs and inlets to islands off the coast. In addition to these more obvious islands, there are areas of dry islands land within substantial areas of bog and floodplain, which have been foci for colonisation by fauna, flora and human inhabitants. However, people have also created their own social islands or isolated communities, on grounds of religious or cultural difference. The conference aims to explore how such environmental or social communities survived in such settings and the particular problems they faced.

Whilst one of the central themes will be the island palaeoecology, archaeology and history of Ireland, we are actively seeking contributions on any aspect of island research.

Key issues to be addressed include:

- The environmental archaeology of island communities, including the influence of marginality on them and their associated biota
- Island buffering mechanisms
- The use and perception of islands during particular periods
- The origin of island floras and faunas & the spread of non indigenous taxa
- Island biogeography
- Inter-relationships between dry and wet environments
- Isolation and inter-dependence within islands
- Creation of social islands or isolated communities
- Connections between islands (networks, relationships between islands and mainland /other communities)

Conference organisers: Dr. Nicki Whitehouse (n.whitehouse@qub.ac.uk), Dr Eileen Murphy (Eileen.Murphy@qub.ac.uk), Dr Finbar McCormick (f.mccormick@qub.ac.uk)
Dr Gill Plunkett (g.plunkett@qub.ac.uk).

Deadline for submission of paper titles and abstracts (300 words max): 1st December 2002. These should be sent to the conference organisers either by email (aea-islands@qub.ac.uk) or by post to:

Conference Programme:

Thurs 24th April

Morning/afternoon: Academic sessions

Evening: Wine Reception

Friday 25th April

Morning/Afternoon: Academic Sessions

Evening: Conference Dinner

Saturday 26th

Morning/afternoon: Optional field trip to Co. Down (Lecale area)

Registration

This covers all academic sessions, tea and coffees and the wine reception. If you require accommodation and wish to attend the conference dinner, please register no later than the 20th February 2003. After this date, individuals will not be able to register for the dinner and will have to make their own accommodation arrangements.

Accommodation

Bed and Breakfast accommodation for the conference has been arranged at Queens, close to the conference venue. Accommodation comprises single rooms (not en suite), at £21 per person per night, including breakfast. For people wishing to stay over Saturday night, they will need to make their own arrangements.

Please see the booking form at the back of the Newsletter for details of costs. Details of the field trip, maps, information on accommodation and transport and a full conference schedule and itinerary will be sent following receipt of booking form

A new publication of the A.G. Leventis Foundation has just been released. Its title is:

Limestone Statuettes of Cypriote Type found in the Aegean. Provenance Studies.

The aim of this book is to propose solutions to various archaeological problems with the help of applied science. This book was written collaboratively by a number of authors that include two archaeologists (Prof. Nota Kourou and Prof. Vassos Karageorghis) and four geologists: three from the Research Centre "Demokritos" of Athens (Dr. Yannis Maniatis, Dr. Kyriaki Polikreti, Dr. Yannis Bassiakos) and Dr. Costas Xenophonos from Cyprus.

This book presents the results of a new interdisciplinary approach to the issue of the origin of Cypriote type statuettes found in a number of Aegean sanctuaries, looking closely at Cypriote types and styles. Suggestions regarding the origin of this kind of statuettes, usually referred to as 'cypro-ionniennes', or statuettes of a 'mixed-style', range from Cypriote to Cypro-Aegean or Naucratis according to studies based on stylistic or iconographic analyses. Similar statuettes from Naucratis in Egypt with Aegean elements incorporating varying degrees of iconography and style broaden the geographical context of this class of statuettes. Although most of the material originates from Cyprus itself, comparable Cypriote material is also known from several sites on the Syro-Palestinian coast. This study has concentrated on statuettes found in the Aegean and places special emphasis on the origin of their limestone. Samples from limestone statuettes found in Aegean sanctuaries such as Lindos or Samos, were studied in comparison to limestone from certain quarries in neighbouring areas, as well as Cyprus and Egypt.

In the first part of this book an archaeological re-examination of the material found in the Aegean in comparison to material from Cyprus and Egypt is undertaken. Past provenance issues, fabric and size, date and distribution, types and major stylistic classes are discussed and a new grouping of the material as a whole is proposed. The typology of the Aegean class is presented in some detail and in comparison to the other two classes (i.e. Cypriote and Naucratic). The few statuettes that bear inscriptions are discussed separately in an attempt to scrutinize evidence possibly related to the origin issue.

In the second part of this book an attempt is made to investigate the origin of the raw stone of the statuettes via physico-chemical methods. Most of the ancient and modern, chalky-limestone quarries of Cyprus, Samos, Rhodes and Egypt (from Alexandria to Cairo) were systematically sampled, in order to form a reference data bank for the likely provenance of the statuettes. Archaeological samples were also taken from statuettes, exhibited in museums in Nicosia, Samos and Copenhagen. All quarry and archaeological samples were examined with optical microscopy and analysed with EPR spectroscopy. A detailed study of the EPR spectroscopy results helped to determine a number of parameters, which distinguished different quarries. All the analysed statuettes (except one, which is most probably of Samian limestone) appear to be carved from Cypriot limestone. This information provides a decisive argument in favour a Cypriot origin for these statuettes.

This book is currently on sale in the offices of the Anastasios G. Leventis Foundation, Nicosia. Price CYP12.00 / Euro20.00. Tel:22-667706/ Fax:22-675002/ Email: leventcy@zenon.logos.cy.net

UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI - MARGO TYTUS VISITING SCHOLARS PROGRAM

The University of Cincinnati Classics Department is pleased to announce the Margo Tytus Visiting Scholars Program. Tytus Fellows, in the fields of philology, history and archaeology will ordinarily be at least 5 years beyond receipt of the Ph. D. Apart from residence in Cincinnati during term, the only obligation of Tytus Fellows is to pursue their own research. Fellowships are tenable during the regular academic year (October 1 to May 31).

There are two categories of Tytus Fellowships, long-term and short-term. Long Term Fellows will come to Cincinnati for a minimum of one academic quarter (two and a half months) and a maximum of three during the regular academic year. They will receive a monthly stipend of $1000 plus housing and a transportation allowance. Short Term Fellows will come to Cincinnati for a minimum of one month and a maximum of two during the regular academic year. They will receive housing and a transportation allowance.

Both Long Term and Short Term Fellows will also receive office space and enjoy the use of the University of Cincinnati and Hebrew Union College Libraries. While at Cincinnati Tytus Fellows will be free to pursue their own research.

The University of Cincinnati Burnam Classics Library is one of the world's premier collections in the field of Classical Studies. Comprising 175,000 volumes, the library covers all aspects of the Classics: the languages and literatures, history, civilization, art, and archaeology. Of special value for scholars is both the richness of the collection and its accessibility -- almost any avenue of research in the classics can be pursued deeply and broadly under a single roof. The unusually comprehensive core collection, which is maintained by three professional classicist librarians, is augmented by several special collections such as 15,000 nineteenth century German Programmschriften, extensive holdings in Palaeography, Byzantine and Modern Greek Studies. At neighboring Hebrew Union College, the Klau Library, with holdings in excess of 400,000 volumes, is rich in Judaica and Near Eastern Studies.

AMERICAN JOURNAL OF ARCHAEOLOGY EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT

The Archaeological Institute of America seeks applications and nominations for the position of Editor-in-Chief of the American Journal of Archaeology. Candidates must have a distinguished record of research and publication in one of the fields covered by the journal as well as prior editorial experience. The duties of the EIC include the solicitation and editing of manuscripts accepted for publication, the appointment of Book Review Editor(s) and an Editorial Advisory Board, and fundraising for the Society for the AJA.

Compensation will be in the form of release time from the EIC's home institution (or in the case of an independent scholar, an equivalent dollar amount). The home institution will be expected to provide additional support, the amount and nature of which is subject to negotiation. The appointment will be for an initial term of three years, renewable once.

The AIA plans to announce the appointment of the new editor in October 2003. She/he will succeed the present editor on 1 July 2004, but there will be a period of shared responsibility beginning in January 2004 in order to ensure a smooth transition. Although the position is based at the home institution of the EIC, the EIC travels to Institute headquarters in Boston on a regular basis. The EIC reports to the Vice President of Publications on policy and editorial matters and consults with the Director of Publications and New Media on operational matters.

Interested applicants should submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, and the names of three references to the search committee by 1 November 2002. Interviews for the position will take place at the January 2003 Annual Meeting of the AIA in New Orleans.

All applications, nominations, inquiries, and supporting materials should be sent to: AJA Search Committee, Archaeological Institute of America, 656 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02215-2006, tel. 617-353-9361, fax 617-353-6550, e-mail aia@aia.bu.edu. The Archaeological Institute of America is an equal opportunity employer.

LECTURER IN ARCHAEOLOGICAL SCIENCE - THE UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM

Applications are invited for a permanent lectureship in archaeological science (either in materials science or in environmental archaeology), to be held in the Department of Archaeology, commencing in either January or February 2003. We are looking for an enthusiastic and lively person, preferably with an outstanding track record of research and an ability to provide provocative and stimulating teaching for both undergraduate and graduate (MA) students. The successful applicant will also be expected to supervise PhD students. Applicants who can offer a period or area specialisation which is not currently taught in the Department, such as the ancient Near East or ancient Egypt, including research by excavation, will be regarded as an advantage. The successful candidate will be expected to enhance both UG and PG teaching by providing their own solely taught modules and, in addition, to contributing to team-taught core modules. Previous teaching experience in a University environment will also be considered an advantage. Members of staff are expected to assume responsibility for one or more aspects of the administration of the Department.

The Department of Archaeology is a comparatively small but energetic and friendly Department situated in the heart of the main University Park campus in the University of Nottingham. There are currently nine full-time members of academic staff: Professor Julian Henderson (archaeological science, ancient technologies, especially glass; Head of Department until 30th September 2002), Professor R. J. A. Wilson (Greek and Roman archaeology, especially Sicily; Head of Department 2002/3), Dr P. W. Dixon (Reader; medieval archaeology, especially castles); Dr W. G. Cavanagh (Senior Lecturer; Neolithic and Bronze Age Greece, especially Minoan and Mycenaean); Dr L. Laing (Senior Lecturer; Dark Age archaeology, especially metalwork); Dr A. G. Poulter (Senior Lecturer; Roman archaeology, especially military remains and the Balkans); Dr H. A. Forbes (Senior Lecturer; ethnoarchaeology, ancient farming and technology); Dr M. J. Pearce (Lecturer; Neolithic and Bronze Age archaeology, especially N. Italy); and Dr Jon Henderson (Iron Age of western Britain, especially Scotland; underwater archaeology). There is also a Scientific Research Officer, who has a four-year contract, Dr M. J. Ponting, who specialises in archaeometallurgy; a Tutor in Archaeological Illustration, Mr D. Taylor, who also like Dr Ponting contributes to teaching; a Research Fellow, Dr N. Stoodley, a specialist in Anglo-Saxon archaeology, especially burial rites in fifth-century England; and a Departmental Secretary, Ms Karen Shooter. The Department also has a number of special lecturers and research associates.

All staff members are research-active, and most are actively engaged on field projects, with an emphasis on the Mediterranean area. Current projects include excavation of glass furnaces, pottery kilns and industrial waste of early and middle Islamic date at al-Raqqa, Syria (Julian Henderson), excavation of a Hellenistic and Roman agricultural settlement in Sicily (Wilson), excavation of a Neolithic and Bronze Age site near Sparta (Cavanagh), excavation of a Byzantine fort at Dichin, Bulgaria and survey of the surrounding territory (Poulter), fieldwork and excavation exploring the nature of Bronze Age mining in north Italy (Pearce) and the investigation of underwater iron age sites in Scotland and Poland (Jon Henderson). A project to explore a medieval village and industrial site actually situated on the University campus 150 m from the Department has also recently been completed (Laing). Post-excavation work continues on the Crickley hill-fort project, Gloucestershire (Dixon). An account of fieldwork undertaken by the Department between 1990 and 1995 is available in R. J. A. Wilson (ed.), From River Trent to Raqqa (Nottingham 1996), obtainable from the Department (price £10.50 including p&p). The Department has been successful in winning major grants from the British Academy, the Humanities Research Board, and its successor, the Arts and Humanities Research Board, both for research projects and under their Research Leave scheme. It received a grade 4 in the 2001 RAE and aims to improve on this in any future exercise. Details of recent staff publications, staff research interests, and other details about the Department, are available from the World Wide Web at www.nottingham.ac.uk/humanities/archaeology.

The Department offers a single honours BA in Archaeology and (from October 2002) a Single Honours BSc in Archaeology. Approximately 30 Single Honours Archaeology undergraduates are admitted each year, with a further 25 entering the University on Joint Honour programmes. Numbers are therefore not huge, and this helps to preserve good personal relations between staff and students: we are proud of the friendly and helpful reputation which the Department enjoys, on which students regularly comment. Joint Honours programmes are currently offered as follows: Archaeology and English, Archaeology and Ancient History, Archaeology and Classical Civilisation, Archaeology and Geography, Archaeology and History. A Joint Honours degree in Archaeology and Art History is to be introduced from October 2002. Teaching at both UG and PG level is by modular structure; each module of approximately 22/24 hours counts for 20 credits, and one of approximately 14 hours for 10 credits. A BA honours degree comprises 360 credits, of which 40 are allotted to the final year dissertation (this however is not compulsory for Joint Honour students). Each member of staff normally undertakes a total teaching load per week of approximately 8/9 hours per week. Each module is normally taught by a mixture of lectures and seminars.

In addition to the undergraduate programmes, there is an ambitious taught Masters programme, with MAs being offered in Archaeology, Archaeology by Research, Roman Archaeology, Medieval Archaeology and Archaeological Materials. There is also an MSc available in the last of these for those students who wish to place a greater emphasis on the science component. There are about 25 MA students on the books at any one time, both full-time (one year) and part-time (two years). An MA degree is made up of 180 credits, generally consisting of four 30-credit taught modules and a 60-credit dissertation. In addition there are approximately 20 students registered for the MPhil and PhD programmes.

The Department has two seminar rooms, both equipped with double projection facilities, and the larger of the two with video facilities as well; a new staff common room; an undergraduate common room; a graduate study room equipped with computers; a laboratory specialising in archaeomaterials equipped with a furnace, an XRF and an SEM; and a photographic dark room. If an environmentalist is appointed to this post the University has given the undertaking to provide extra laboratory space. A computer room, a central university facility, is also located within the building occupied by the Department. Also housed within the Department but like the computer-lab a University rather than a Departmental facility is the University Museum (Director: Professor Wilson).

In addition, several autonomous units are housed within the Department: the Trent and Peak Archaeology Unit, a field unit responsible for archaeological investigation and research in advance of development in the Trent Valley of Nottinghamshire and the Peak District of Derbyshire, which currently employs about 16 archaeologists; the Dendrochronology Unit, specialising in the dating of medieval structures; the Historic Buildings Research Unit (Mr G. Simpson), concerned with surveys of medieval buildings, especially cathedrals; and Heritage Research Projects (directed by Dr Dixon), which deals above all with post-excavation work on English Heritage backlog projects, and is funded by English Heritage.

Nottingham University is currently the most popular university in the country, based on the number of applications per place: its very attractive, green-field campus with extensive grounds, and its central location within England, are undoubtedly factors contributing to this popularity. The calibre of students is therefore high, a feature regularly commented on by our external examiners.

The University Hallward Library is conveniently situated three minutes' walk away from the Department. It houses an excellent teaching collection and adequate research facilities for Archaeology. Better libraries, in Oxford and Cambridge, are respectively only 100 minutes' and 80 minutes' journey away by car.

Informal contact about this post may be made with the Head of Department, Professor Julian Henderson, tel: 0115-9514840; fax: 0115-9514812; e-mail: julian.henderson@nottingham.ac.uk.

A full c.v. and list of publications (if any) should accompany your letter of application. Application forms are available on the WWW at <http://www.nottingham.ac.uk/personnel/vacancies/academic.html> or from the Personnel Office, Highfield House, The University of Nottingham, University Park, Nottingham, NG7 2RD. # EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: AMERICAN JOURNAL OF ARCHAEOLOGY

The Archaeological Institute of America seeks applications and nominations for the position of Editor-in-Chief of the American Journal of Archaeology. Candidates must have a distinguished record of research and publication in one of the fields covered by the journal as well as prior editorial experience. The duties of the EIC include the solicitation and editing of manuscripts accepted for publication, the appointment of Book Review Editor(s) and an Editorial Advisory Board, and fundraising for the Society for the AJA.

Compensation will be in the form of release time from the EIC's home institution (or in the case of an independent scholar, an equivalent dollar amount). The home institution will be expected to provide additional support, the amount and nature of which is subject to negotiation. The appointment will be for an initial term of three years, renewable once.

The AIA plans to announce the appointment of the new editor in October 2003. She/he will succeed the present editor on 1 July 2004, but there will be a period of shared responsibility beginning in January 2004 in order to ensure a smooth transition. Although the position is based at the home institution of the EIC, the EIC travels to Institute headquarters in Boston on a regular basis. The EIC reports to the Vice President of Publications on policy and editorial matters and consults with the Director of Publications and New Media on operational matters.

Interested applicants should submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, and the names of three references to the search committee by 1 November 2002. Interviews for the position will take place at the January 2003 Annual Meeting of the AIA in New Orleans.

All applications, nominations, inquiries, and supporting materials should be sent to:

AJA Search Committee
Archaeological Institute of America
656 Beacon Street
Boston, MA 02215-2006
T: 617-353-9361
F: 617-353-6550
